

The Holiday Season Is a Joyous Time for South Carolinians.

In Keeping with the spirit of the season, the Babcock center Foundation proudly presents the 2014 "Official City Ornament". This year's ornament depicts the South Carolina State Museum.

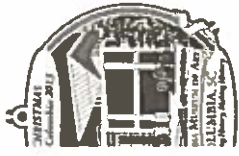

The South Carolina State Museum is one of the largest museums in the Southeast. It is housed in the former Columbia Mills Building which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The mill, which opened in 1894, was the first totally electric textile mill in the world.

The museum officially opened on October 29, 1988 and averages about 20,000 visitors each month. Visitors are able to experience South Carolina from the mountains to the sea in one building. The museum has been honored as an outstanding tourism attraction and also for its adaptation of the historic mill building.

On August 16, 2014, the museum celebrated the opening of its new 4D theater, planetarium and observatory. It is the first and only museum in the nation to host all of these attractions under one roof as well as including an expansive museum focusing on art, history, science and technology.

Through the new observatory, classrooms around the State will be able to remotely access the telescope, adding an interactive component to science lessons. The 4D theater is the only permanent theater of its kind in South Carolina. It adds a new dimension to the 3D experience by stimulating the senses of touch and smell, as well as sight and hearing. The 145 seat planetarium displays images with a digital projection system
